

🌸 My volunteering way in Indiaaaa 🌸 Part 3. 4.

In the months - November and December was my way here full of discovering and revelations. Based on „keep on just doing it and never give up”. And about how to go with the flow, is sometimes the best decision what you can make.

Slum 'Sunshines' school

We just feel so used to there. After 4 months, we start to know children really well, and the same thing works vice versa. Having a favourite ones even though we know we shouldn't. We know how to get them, what works on them, what makes them smile. And releasing, that it is the best way of teaching them, at least something. Because of their age and our language barrier it is sometimes very difficult to get each other. Smile, fun and playfulness is definitely the way what always works. ✌️
During last two months we had with children except of daily teaching routine some other activities too.

Clean hands before entering the school

What I enjoyed the most was Children's day in Science Park. Picnic in garden and tasty food. The cherry on the top happened on our way back. Half of the children couldn't handle the drive, and all of them started to vomit. I will definitely remember this forever..

Chilika

The best runaway from stereotype and unbelievable trumpet sounds of Bhubaneswar streets it's Chilika. It's island with lot of quiet, beautiful palm trees and again just with lot of quiet. You can literally just hear the sound of the wind there. Pure nature, pure people. Just with beauty all around.

In here we have few running projects. During our presents there we helped with all we could.

1. Toilets reconstruction project when we painted on the walls of reconstructed toilets logos of organizations and messages.

2. Eco tourism project when we helped built pathway to eco houses.

3. Food for peace project is running on Rotighar island with untouchable people.

When we arrived, they served us food. Very simple dal and rice, eaten with hands. Children were sitting around us on the ground, while staring. After lunch we had dancing program. When children made us to dance, and after we played some games with them also. Very beautiful and powerful experience, to see how people can still exist like this, and to don't know other.

4. And! Last day of staying at Chilika, we prepared with Mousi, what was nickname of woman which took care of us during a stay, the best "Khiri". It's a sweet rice made with milk, cashews, raisins, cardamom and of course sugar. Biiig yum yum yum

Honey bee keeping program

Because of our JRP organization is involved to all bee keeping process, we got the chance to be a part of real bee keeping thing. Including of collecting honey in tribal/village areas near Bhubaneswar, where we got to know bees. And subsequently we were on honey bee exhibition where we were selling our made honey. Where I falled in love with one other honey producer, which was selling handmade honey organic products, soaps and spreads. It really caught my attention.
